“ After spending a year volunteering at Peru I could not recommend it more. The experience and understanding of the communities enabled me to gain real insight into the problems faced by rural Peruvian communities and by the NGOs and organizations that work with them. During my time at Peru, I dealt with Fair Trade Organizations, helped translate texts, wrote articles for their webs and newsletters; and guided a group of tourists on one of the tours. A thoroughly valuable experience! ”

“ This trip gave me the key to know one of the most fascinating countries I have ever visited in my life. I travelled through the dense fog of Lima, the brisk air of Cusco and the fierce stillness of Machu Picchu. But Peru is more than this: it is the warmth of the people, the tenderness of the mothers and the shyness of their children.

This trip gave me the opportunity to meet the peasant communities of the Andes and share a moment of their hard life. I entered a world made of small things where living is an everyday bet (just think of the street children who live on their poor sales).

I forgot warm water, bathrooms, heating and all the comforts of my life; and I came home a bit dirtier and a bit dizzier (do not forget the altitude of Peru) but more rich with understanding.”
